A director at Baretz + Brunelle, Clay is a legal, corporate and crisis communications advisor for law firms and other professional services organizations. He helps advance his clients' underlying business objectives by building targeted, high-impact campaigns that position them as experts and influencers in their respective industries.

A media-savvy storyteller, Clay partners with his clients to hone their messaging, communicate their value and elevate their public profile. His knowledge of the law—across a broad spectrum of practice areas—enables him to secure valuable media opportunities for his clients, establishing them as thought leaders.

Clay spent his early career as an attorney, first with a top-tier plaintiffs' firm and later as in-house counsel for a film finance company. He began his marketing and PR career in Los Angeles advising nonprofit organizations, including St. Joseph Center and Inner-City Arts, on fundraising strategy and donor communications. Before joining B+B, he served as an in-house communications manager and writer for a midsize national law firm. Clay is a graduate of University of California, Berkeley, and received his J.D. from University of California, Hastings College of the Law.
